B In addition those U-shaped pockets can also be formed in many other ways. Examples in that respect are shown in German patent applications-Nos 198 26 429.1, ~~198 31 967.3~~, 198 57 575.0 and 199 03 297.1 which have not yet been published at the date of the present application. In particular the side walls of the pockets can be extended downwardly so that the result overall is an H-shape, or a plurality of U-shaped pockets which are arranged one above the other can be arranged in vertically mutually superposed relationship and connected together so that the above-mentioned U-shape or H-shape is repeated a number of times and the respective lower pockets are closed at their top side by the bottom of the pocket thereabove. The pockets can also be formed from individual webs of substantially the same shape and size, in each of which the lower end of a web adjacent to a first web is bent over in a J-shape and connected to the corresponding adjacent web, and so forth.
